(Reception Following the Talk)

The Affordable Care Act of 2010 faces opposition in federal and state legislatures, the judicial system, and among candidates vying for the Republican presidential nomination, yet is being implemented across the country every day. Mr. Cohn explores the current efforts of policy makers intent on implementing health reform and of those intent on blocking it.

Jonathan Cohn has written about national politics and its influence on American communities at The New Republic for the past decade. He is a senior fellow at the think-tank Demos and a contributing editor at The American Prospect, where he served previously as the executive editor.
